

avant garde
smokey

goth girls

thou shalt knot

the new red

this way up

blackheads

FREE FALLING

Loose, undone tresses and no-makeup makeup is SO last (and last last) season. Get ready for a refreshing jolt as Fall/Winter 2015 brings on a nouveau grown-up, luxe, eccentric take on beauty, with spanking new spins and newfangled twists that ruled the runways. Here comes Fall... By Shantila Lee

FENDI

A smudgy, almost wet smokey eye look Philips did at Diane Von Furstenberg with sweeps of charcoal and slate eyeshadow around the entire eye.

Les 4 Ombres
238 Tisse
d'Automne

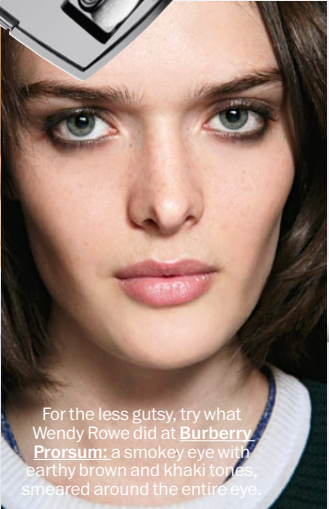

Diane Kendal went equally abstract and full-on fantasy at Proenza Schouler, with thick black eyeshadow in swooshes across the inner corners and out to the middle of the eye.

Eyeliner in Black Moon,
NARS

AVANT GARDE SMOKEY

Just when you thought you'd seen it all at Fendi, from gold glitterbombs to fabric stick-ons, Peter Philips nailed it again with a very rebellious, punk-cool inimitably trail-blazing smokey eye look. Philips slathered on gobs of mascara (5 layers, we kid you not) for seriously cloggy lashes, then feathered the mascara stains into painterly brushstrokes of eyeliner into a hot mess of smudges and spots in a spectacular wing. "I used layers and layers of mascara, kind of left marks everywhere and then played with them," quipped Philips, singularly capable of making mind-blowing, bar-setting art out of mascara misfires.

For the less gutsy, try what Wendy Rowe did at Burberry Prorsum; a smokey eye with earthy brown and khaki tones, smeared around the entire eye.

Smoky Palette,
Laura Mercier

Diorshow Blackout
Mascara, Dior

NARS

TOOL TIP:
Use jet-black mascara with piecey, separated hairs on the lashes, but this time let those flecks of mascara repel back onto the lids. Then use liquid eyeliner to elongate and connect the shapes.

THE WATERLINE

We can't get enough of Petros Petrohilos's high-octane, wet reverse liner look at Cavalli, for one smashing reason: it sets a whole new place for where eyeliner goes this season, right under the waterline (we're talking between the lower lashes and the eye, not below the lower lashes). "It adds intensity to the eye," explained Petrohilos of the semi-grungy effect, adorning the girls with the smudgy black and silver kohl combo, substituting glitter for classic highlighter and making it look wearable all at once.

Pat McGrath topped every previous look she did at Versace with imperfect black eyeliner smudged at the waterline, musing that even Donatella "liked that the black bled a little bit".

Long-Wear Gel Eyeliner in Caviar, Bobbi Brown

McGRATH'S TRICK:

Her trick for Versace-esque eyeliner that gives you a "tough, sharper look and brings out the color of your eyes," is to use a black kohl pencil to tightline around the inner waterline of the entire eye. "It's a very daring and powerful woman—fearless Versace."

ROBERTO CAVALLI

Pecheux went for minimalism at Balmain, filling in brows and brushing through with a brow comb.

HIGH BROW

Tis the season for the Cara Delevingne brow! We've seen brows disappear, get bleached and go super thick in past seasons, but this time makeup artists are evoking an au naturel, separated bushiness that we love. Tom Pecheux gave brows a groomed, fluffy coif at Balmain, then did the same at Anthony Vaccarello. So take a cue: thin and overly defined is OUT, bring on the bush.

If dark arches are your thing, try what Lucia Pieroni did at Missoni: strong, arched brows with a line drawn through them in black.

ANTHONY VACCARELLO

Brow Definer, Laura Mercier

Brow Sword, Shu Uemura

Brow Kit, Bobbi Brown

THIS WAY UP

Windswept waves and barely-there bends are set to be a thing of catwalks past, with Guido Palau setting the scene for properly coiffed-yet-unstuffy updos at Prada. The fantasy factor of his so over-the-top fabulous, bejewelled high ponies were undeniable, with strands blow-dried upward and pulled into a taut tail at the top of the head, wrapped with an elastic and swung to one side, adorned with blooming baubles for added punch. "You get this combination of a quite formal shape with young [punk] ends, and this beautiful jewelry kind of lifts the whole thing," said Palau.

More Guido magic at Marc Jacobs where he secured topknot buns at the forehead.

Third time's the charm for Guido! We love these cool wrap-around chignons at the crown at Balenciaga.

PRADA

Guido's glossy French chignons at Oscar de la Renta. "In fashion, there is always a need to see something new, and I feel like this is the time," said Guido. "And to see hair that is more done and polished is interesting."

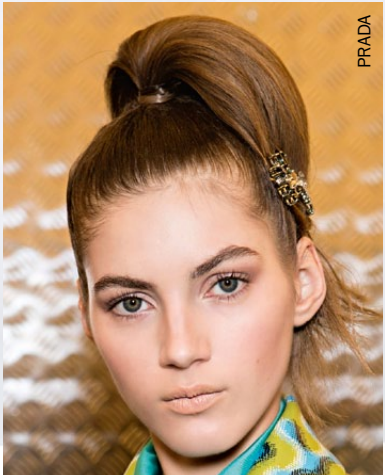

Forme Fatale, Kerastase

PALAU'S WAY:

To try the look at Oscar de la Renta, Palau advises not nailing it on your first try. Wind up your hair and loosely pin it in place, then give the shape time to "set in." Unravel and re-create the French twist—the second time around typically results in a tighter finish.

Stay High 18, Redken

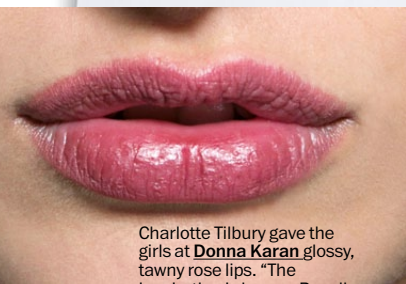

PRADA

GUIDO PALAU: "I love this idea of a beautiful woman who does her hair. We often talk about the downtown girl—this easy texture and the coolness—but when you see a woman wearing a beautiful dress and she's very pulled together, there's something effortless about it."

At John Richmond grape-y wine tones went on matte, intense and fabulous.

Fall 2015 Color Collection VIP Lipstick, NARS

Charlotte Tilbury gave the girls at Donna Karan glossy, tawny rose lips. "The inspiration is Lauren Bacall in a much more sober, minimalist, contemporary way—taking a little bit of that beauty and glamour and sort of deconstructing it."

More berry-toned lipstick at Dolce & Gabbana, where Pat McGrath upped the glamour factor with burgundy and ruby shades.

Rouge Coco Shine in Temeraire, Chanel

Lip Cover in Tulip Pink, Burberry Beauty

Revolution Lipstick in Rapture, Urban Decay

MARC JACOBS

FRANÇOIS NARS: "I looked to the swans of the 50s and 60s like Babe Paley or Jacqueline de Ribes to inspire the look. Matte skin and a defined brow bring a nice structure to the face, balancing the greige gloss of the lid with the matte, velvety eggplant colour of the lip."

THE NEW RED

Marc Jacobs ended New York Fashion Week with a bang, officially declaring the no-makeup makeup look is over via a bash of matte berry lipstick, in a striking departure from last season's bare-faced look. When asked why he chose such a dramatic hue for the lips, François Nars joked, "Because it's been too long," referring to the show's short supply of makeup in past seasons. "Really, though, we chose to do lipstick because it fit the girl Marc wanted to see on the runway," explained Nars—a put-together dame with a strangeness and edginess that is so Marc Jacobs. The new red this season are purples and warm pinks, so get cued in.

BLUGIRL

3.1 PHILLIP LIM

NAEEM KHAN

Lots of shows decked out models in very 70s Brit, brick red hues.

Lip Extravangaza, Bobby Brown

Ombre Essentielle in Midnight, Chanel

Illusion d'Ombre in Fleur de Pierre, Chanel

Ecrin 1 Couleur in Flash Black, Guerlain

Silk Smooth Eyeshadow in G White Silver 909, Shu Uemura

Alice Lane gave the girls at Suno a hefty graphic block of liner at the outer corners. The new cat eye?

At Kenzo Aaron de Mey lacquered on a slash of stark white pigment applied with a chopped-up paintbrush for an erratic edge.

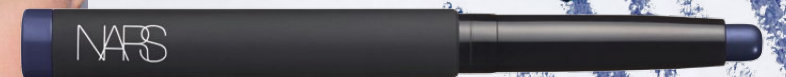

CHANEL

BLOCKHEADS

"Graphic has a certain power," said Tom Pecheux of the dual graphic eyes he conjured at Chanel. "When you see smoky, you think of something more light, gentle and romantic. Graphic is more powerful." Pecheux called it the "eye catcher", adorning half the girls, including Kendall Jenner, with a 'girl' look: dramatic winged-out shadow in a matte black, and had the rest like Cara Delevingne in a "boy" look, working a resolutely androgynous, heavily-contoured brow bone and inner socket. Pecheux noted the inspiration was "Parisian ladies who lunch", boys and girls meeting at the Brasserie Gabrielle with the brooding glance of a young French garçon or the sultry ooze of a cat-eyed mademoiselle.

PETER PHILIPS: "I thought about what the girls were wearing - so the model that had the slashed skirt with the blue shirt, of course she got the blue eye. Quite a lot of the models had green eyes, so for them I used the red or the purple shade, to bring out the colour of the eyes."

Eye Opening Act Glens Velvet Shadow Stick, NARS

DIOR

Dior

Peter Philips decked out the girls at Dior with a bold chunk of either magenta, blue or purple metallic shadow with a wet brush, in an amoeba-like shape from Raf Simons' mutated animal print. "It was like colour-blocking for the eyes," said Philips, legendary for taking a single feature as his focus and making it POP.

More damp, wet, raked-back texture at Altuzarra, where Odile Gilbert pinned the soaked tresses into flat, messy updos.

Pulled together, post-swim ponytails fastened at medium height ruled at Stella McCartney.

SPORTS LUXE

The catwalks were resplendent in hair ornaments du jour, but we're picking out the sporty headbands spotted at Proenza Schouler (in leather, across the forehead), in shiny candy hues at Honor and in ruched leather at Fendi. Totally doable.

PROENZA SCHOULER

ANTHONY TURNER: "I get the feeling that doing absolutely nothing is starting to creep out a little bit," noted Turner of the finished package. "We're starting to enjoy playing around a little bit more and having fun. It doesn't have to feel so real—we can enjoy the fantasy of a fashion show again."

FENDI

Sam McKnight wrapped CC-embossed ribbon bands over dishevelled twists at Chanel.

ISABEL MARANT

Fashion Waves 07 Texturizing Sea Spray, Redken

THOU SHALT KNOT

"You have to cultivate nonchalance," explained the insouciantly chic Isabel Marant backstage, speaking of the easy yet done look at the show. "I think we're specialists in making things look effortless. Even if a lot of work goes into that, you never let it show." Sam McKnight was in the swing of things, also aiming for that "thrown-together look", raking back strands sprayed with water and twisting them up into a wet, French girl bun top-knot, adding texture with a sea salt spray. "It's about not being precious about things," said McKnight—and what could be simpler than a knot?

BIG BLING

Chunky baubles of bling were in no short supply this season, and the winner is James Kaliardos' genius under-eye stick-ons at Rodarte. Tiny Swarovski crystals were meticulously glued to a silver string, then attached to the models' lower lash lines.

Eye Shadow in G Yellow 345, Shu Uemura

At Temperley London, Val Garland played with sequins, decorating the entire lid and winging out past the brow.

JAMES KALIARDOS: "I really wanted to do crystals, but I didn't want [the models] to look like a stripper. This makes the eye [appear] bigger and is another way of activating an area of the face that is typically dark." to bring out the colour of the eyes."

EMMANUEL UNGARO

Lipstick, Michael Kors

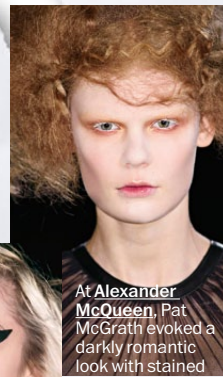

Rouge Coco in Erik, Chanel

GILES

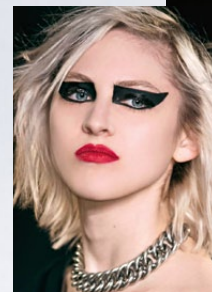

Ingrid Audacious Lipstick, NARS

Goth ruled at Saint Laurent, where the girls flaunted an exaggerated winged-out, square block of black eyeliner and neon lipstick.

At Alexander McQueen, Pat McGrath evoked a darkly romantic look with stained lips, rose gold eyes and white mascara, against a pulled-up cloud of frizzy hair.

GOTH GIRLS

Two lessons to be learnt from the semi-punky onyx lips at Giles and Ungaro: one, black lipstick isn't just for goth girls anymore; and two, you CAN rock it without looking scary. Lucia Pieroni layered clear gloss over blackened cherry lipstick at Giles, describing the effect as "a little bit punk and a little bit gothic, but there is also something about it that's cool and fresh." Pieroni left the skin matte and clean for a reason, calling the look "no-makeup makeup with a twist." A twist that jolts even the most seasoned beauty editor, but ultimately one of the biggest lipstick trends of the season.

LUCIA'S WAY:

2 tips for wearing goth lippie the right way: "Lipstick this dark can make your mouth appear smaller," says Pieroni, so emphasising the outline of your lips and Cupid's bow is essential. Also, "if you keep the face light, then the juxtaposition of the skin and the black lips is quite beautiful."

Superslick Liquid Eyeliner in Black, MAC

Mascara Resurrection, Urban Decay

THE WORLD ACCORDING TO PAT MCGRATH

"The return of makeup, from zero to full throttle," is how maquillage magician Pat McGrath described the tszuj'ed up, fully polished looks that hit with a bang at the Fall/Winter 2015 shows. Bid Adieu to the not quite there, no-makeup laid-back jive of last season, leading the pack backstage at every Fashion Week, Pat took things to a whole new level. "Things ranged from pure untouched skin to the bravest, most individualistic interpretation of beauty you can imagine," all with a common theme of "character, bringing the face to life, capturing the personality of the girl," noted Pat. Here, we look at her most exceptional looks, signed, sealed and delivered in the smashing way only Pat McGrath ever could.

GIVENCHY

Givenchy: 'Chola Victorian' faces embellished with bijoux. Lashes dripping in pearls, glistening septum rings, and suspended ornate jewellery made this look the superstar of the season.

Lanvin: tough-edged kohl-rimmed eyes applied inside the waterline and smudged out.

Dolce & Gabbana: lips stained in shades of rose and cheeks flushed in petal pinks.

Victoria Beckham: driving more focus to the under eye area, Pat did "heavy eyeliner under the eye", in a smudgy, smokey haze.

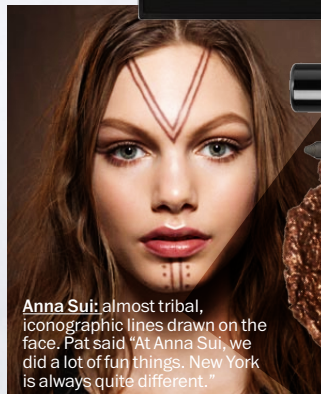

Crazy for Color Lip Color Palette, Bobbi Brown

Maison Margiela: fluorescent neon layerings of eyeliner and clown-esque mouths. What a scream!

The ultimate backstage moment that had us all a-buzz was non-makeup! This is the wife she snapped with Ben Stiller and Owen Wilson backstage at Valentino, where the Zoolander comeback cameo took place.

Anna Sui: almost tribal, iconographic lines drawn on the face. Pat said "At Anna Sui, we did a lot of fun things. New York is always quite different."

Stylo Yeux Waterproof in 914 Feuilles, Chanel