

BORN WITH IT

Chanel's new Les Beiges collection gives you that from-within summer radiance without trying at all

Le Vernis nail polish

Think of Chanel Le Bieges, and the first thing that pops to mind is that so-Chanel beige hue that adorns all the packaging, then the sheer powders that infuse a Parisienne glow with a swipe, and that wee tube of Healthy Glow Cream that you'd slather on for a hit of radiance. The look is that totally au naturel, outdoorsy glow, a just-come-from-the-sun flush, sans streaks or blotches via how the powders always go on super smooth and error-free, no matter how clumsy you are with the half-moon shaped brush that comes with. It's all very liberating, just like how Coco Chanel created couture that was effortlessly elegant and broke all the rules; these powders are total freedom and comfort for a woman who chooses to look completely natural and unadorned.

With the new coterie of Les Beiges products out this month, keep that effect in mind, but now with a whole new range that we're all oohing and aahing over, starting with the new Healthy Glow Multi-Colour Marinière powders. One is a bronzy hue and the other a blusher-esque pink, striped with two shades—the lighter one for highlighting the top of the cheek and under the browbone, the darker tone for contouring cheekbones and a blend of both applied all over creates a healthy luminosity. They come with UVA/UVB SPF15 protection and pack shea butter and Vitamin E that hydrate the skin for that dewy, healthy finish.

Next are the new Colour Sticks (we've been waiting for EONS for this) that are a hybrid of colour and skincare: teeming with skin goodies like coconut oil, beeswax, cotton flower concentrate and white rose plant cells, the rich formula is a melt-away, second-skin sensation. Add to that sheer, pearlescent pigments that go on super smooth and easy (a swipe of the stick on the cheek and finger blending is all it takes), minus blotches, lighting up the skin with a velvety, creamy texture.

The rest of the collection is a celebration of nudes and that natural glimmer: a Hydrating Lip Balm that every gal should tow in her bag, that is everything you want from a lip balm—soft, light and non-sticky with supreme moisture from emollient oils and plant extracts. The two new Lèvres Scintillantes lip gloss hues in Rose Tendre and Beige Star are fabulous taupe glosses to complement the whole look, and the four nude Le Vernis nail polish colours are beyond perfection: Beige Rosé, Beige Pur, Precious Beige and Lovely Beige, one for every skin tone.
